AHF supports your company's success in a growing and competitive marketplace by leveraging science-based production infrastructure that is both flexible and scalable. Our services are grounded in deep regulatory expertise and an unwavering commitment to quality and safety throughout every stage of development — from initial concept to the final product. We are constantly improving production efficiency and capabilities, with our product research leaders standing firmly on the frontline.

Teamwork

At AHF, we pride ourselves on being a dedicated and highly skilled staff.

We deeply understand that a sharp and unified team can make a big difference.

Our warm-hearted and diverse group excels at getting things done efficiently through our collaborative spirits.

Our team-first approach is a representation of the dynamic that accelerates a product from ideation to a standout in the industry.

Best Quality

By following good manufacturing practices and running additional internal programs, AHF goes above and beyond to make our products truly of the best quality.

Our strict vendor qualification program separates the quality of ingredients we use from some of the lower grades found in the market.

With diligent internal programs such as environmental monitoring, cleaning, allergen control, food safety and defense, our entire in-process control institutes a complete well-rounded approach to what defines a quality product.

Meeting testing specifications and validating label claims ties together the overall quality of our work – and your product.

Customer Satisfaction

Over the years, AHF has been providing our services to hundreds of clients, from national retail chains and brands to international distributors, all around the world.

Our constant customer approval stems from our quick responsiveness and service through real-time production tracking and communication.

Our dedicated team across all departments proudly aims for precision and implements our structured policies and model of Quality by Design.

We strive to work closely with all our customers and clients to meet their needs for long term success.

AHF is comprised of exceptionally talented and knowledgeable scientists, chemists, researchers, developers, formulation and process engineers spanning over 30 years of experience. We are here to guide and support you through every stage of the product research, development and manufacturing processes.

Our full-service, turnkey solutions fuse together science, functionality, innovation, creativity and marketability to create stand-out products in the dietary supplement and pharmaceutical industries.

Our team will use your specifications and goals to design a custom formula specifically for you. Let us know your guidelines such as which ingredients to include, whether it should be natural or synthetic, flavor preferences, product function, etc.

Most importantly, your product will be scientifically formulated to use the proper, non-excessive amounts of overage to account for oxidation and disintegration rates.

We are here to bring your vision and product to life!

Quality is heavily embedded in our culture and every aspect of our operations.

First and foremost, the selection of our ingredients and the suppliers we source from are imperative. AHF's strict vendor qualification program is the benchmark of our many quality assurance programs and processes.

Our goal is to choose ingredients approved by QC and R&D that will contribute to your finished product meeting its label claim expectations throughout the products life cycle. Therefore, assuring a potent and effective product.

We source ingredients through reputable and qualified vendors to guarantee purity, safety and efficacy in every batch manufactured. We take into consideration physical properties and characteristics of all ingredient grades available.

Also, we staff highly qualified R&D scientists to develop your products formula. They will meticulously choose the correct ingredients and excipients to ensure the best possible version of the product and manufacturing experience.

We optimize each formula to account for oxidation and degradation rates. This covers all the important bases - optimal machine performance, production efficiency, short lead times, minimal material loss, cost effectiveness and the finished products consistency, potency and stability.

Our on-site stability study services will give you the advantage to start obtaining data as early as the pre-production R&D batch stage – rather than waiting several months later with a costly third-party stability lab.

In addition, the trend analysis for your product will be more accurate in comparison to providing a third-party stability lab with a finished packaged product sometimes several months after its initial manufacturing stage.

This convenience and precision are what separates AHF as one of the best manufacturing partners in the world.

Our dual registration for pharmaceutical and nutraceutical manufacturing provides our customers with the assurance that we produce all products at the highest level.

With our deep roots originating in the pharmaceutical space, we incorporate proven and established methodologies, techniques and procedures into our supplement/nutraceutical development and manufacturing.

AHF is proud to be one of very few CDMO/CMO companies to be NSF/ANSI 455-2 GMP certified for manufacturing, NSF Certified for Sport® and Halal registered.

Along with being regularly audited by organizations such as the FDA, NSF and IFANCA, we also meet the requirements of various third-party auditors representing industry leading brands with global reach and higher chances of liability.

Any outsourcing or overflow capacity assistance can be supported here at AHF. We are the perfect partner for any brand (globally established or newly launched) in need of a reliable and credible co-manufacturer to produce and package their products.

Our in-house QC lab and innovation center offers analytical testing to validate both raw materials and finished products to meet required specifications for identity, strength, purity and physical composition.

Our technical experts can help you develop a robust testing portfolio that perfectly aligns with the specific needs of your company and products.

- Identification analysis and verification of all nutritional ingredients.
- Potency (Assay) testing to confirm the strength of your active compounds through all stages of production.
- Purity testing to analyze the presence of heavy metals, microbials and confirmation that your products are free of other potential contaminants.
 - Physical analysis of essential properties such as moisture content, loss on drying, water percentage, particle size distribution, density, disintegration and more.

Our extensive range of methodologies will verify and validate your label claims with the proof that an ingredient was recovered at the proper dosage after the manufacturing process completes.

All our products meet the quality performance standards published in the United States Pharmacopeia (USP). These standards specify allowable rates of disintegration, dissolution, dosage strength, range of acceptable impurities and microbiological value.

AHF offers on-site stability studies and trend analysis as part of our extensive research and product development capabilities.

This process will truly validate a product's shelf life, completely backing up your expiration date with data required by major retail and wholesale distribution channels.

Trend analysis and evaluating a product disintegration and oxidation rate under several temperatures, humidities and time points will help our R&D scientists determine if further improvements can be made to your products formula.

This data will support our theories in choosing the proper overages and excipients to ensure the best possible version of the product and manufacturing experience.

Our on-site stability testing services give you the advantage to start obtaining data as early as the pre-production R&D batch stage – rather than waiting several months later with a costly third-party stability lab.

In addition, your products trend analysis will be most accurate in comparison to providing a third-party stability lab with a finished product sometimes several months after its initial encapsulation or compression stage.

This convenience and precision are what separates AHF as one of the best manufacturing partners in the world.

Our humidity chambers are calibrated for both Real-Time and Accelerated stability environments that are in accordance to USP, IADSA and ICH guidelines.

Each capsule formula is carefully evaluated by our senior formulation scientists to meet quality standards in its label claims, expiration and maximize manufacturing performance.

Natural based excipients are available for formulation and production. Excipients are a crucial part of both the quality and manufacturing sides of product development.

Our formulation scientists will meticulously choose the correct excipients and ingredient overages to ensure the best possible version of the product and manufacturing experience.

By following this process of formulating in excipients and overages to account for oxidation and disintegration rates, we ensure all the important bases are covered - optimal machine performance, production efficiency, best possible lead time, minimal material loss, cost effectiveness and the finished products consistency, potency and stability (label claims).

All these aspects collectively take part in producing the highest-quality product.

AHF offers a diverse selection of tablet presses and custom tooling designed for several variations in shapes, sizes, debossing and delivery methods.

Inactive ingredients (excipients) are typically used to bind the tablets together, preserving their integrity while ensuring they disintegrate properly once consumed.

Debossing letters, numbers, or shapes into the tablet's surface can enhance brand identity and improve marketability.

If your product requires a delayed release of its active ingredients, our product development team will intergrade a sustained release application to resist its disintegration.

Customer flavored and sweetened chewable, sublingual and fast-melt tablets for rapid absorption are specifically designed with attention to their smell, taste, aftertaste, and mouthfeel.

With our in-house innovation and consulting division, Summit Life Science, Inc. (SLS), AHF is proud to offer an extensive list of services to support your research and product development needs. Specializing in regulatory consulting, process development, IP licensing, herbal medicine-based phytochemical screenings, ingredient evaluation and delivery enhancement.

Proprietary technologies allow us to design unique products with improved bioavailability and stability. Our SEDDS technology is a cutting-edge technology that creates highly water-soluble ingredients resulting in 3 to 5 times higher bioavailability and absorption rate.

Over 30 years of experience in FDA filings for API, OTC, NDA, DS, MF, IND, BD, ANDA, 505B2, NDI, GRAS, DMF, and EUA.

To support your product development project, we can offer contract research services including In Vitro, In Vivo, phytochemical animal studies and clinical trials. Our manufacturing facility can also accommodate small batch runs to test your new product.

Ingredient efficacy evaluation services including phytochemical screenings, ID testing, DNA verification and more. Along with intellectual property licensing including trademark, patent filing and domain applications.

Established extensive partnerships with pharmaceutical companies, renowned university pharmacy schools and medical schools throughout the United States.

SEDDS Technology Platform and Delivery System – Focuses on poorly water-soluble compounds to improve solubility, absorption and bioavailability. This addresses the New Chemical Entity challenge for new drugs, 505B2 drugs and has shown successful results on dietary supplements.

Liposomal Ingredient Enhancement Technology – Active ingredients enclosed in liposomes (tiny lipid bubbles) that are transported and released directly into the bloodstream for advanced bioavailability. Liposomal technology has been believed to deliver the benefits of intravenous therapy through the ease of oral consumption.

I2O Technology Platform and Drug Delivery System – Injection to Oral dosage (I2O) – our unique technology platform focuses on peptide, protein and big molecule drug substance development. We have multiple success cases developing approved drugs, Phase III, Phase II and Concept approved development of new drugs.

OTF Technology Platform and Drug Delivery System – Oral Thin Film (OTF) Technology Platform focuses on fast dissolve compounds, improving the solubility, absorption, PK and PD. This focuses on the Old Chemical Entity challenge in the formulation and 505B2 new drugs development.
